Chair of the Board of Trustees, Virtua Health, Inc. · Chairman, AMREP Corporation (NYSE)

Edward B. Cloues, II, J.D. is one of the most accomplished and most consequential corporate governance leaders active in the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast markets today. His career of more than five decades spans the full arc of American corporate life from the partner corridors of one of the world's great law firms, through the chairman and chief executive's office of a publicly traded manufacturing enterprise, across the boardrooms of multiple New York Stock Exchange and NASDAQ Global Market companies, and into the governing chambers of South Jersey's largest healthcare system, producing along the way a depth of M&A transactional experience, CEO-level operating judgment, public company fiduciary discipline, and multi-industry board governance capability that is genuinely rare at any level of corporate leadership, and all but singular among the independent directors and board chairs who serve the Mid-Atlantic region's most significant public and nonprofit institutions today.

Ed currently serves as Chair of the Board of Trustees of Virtua Health, Inc., the largest healthcare system in South Jersey with 16,000 employees, a role he assumed in January 2022 following twelve years of distinguished service as a Trustee. In that capacity, he leads the governing board of a nonprofit academic healthcare institution that has undergone a profound and strategically consequential transformation during his tenure from a highly respected regional community healthcare provider into a recognized academic healthcare leader whose expanding portfolio of clinical services, research capabilities, and community health programs positions it among the most forward-looking and most institutionally credible healthcare systems in the greater Philadelphia region. As Board Chair, Ed brings to Virtua's governance the same combination of strategic clarity, fiduciary discipline, and executive credibility that has defined his contributions to every institution he has led.

Concurrently, Ed serves as Chairman of the Board of Directors of AMREP Corporation, a New York Stock Exchange-listed land development and homebuilding enterprise with significant operations in New Mexico. He joined the AMREP Board in 1994 and subsequently assumed progressively broader governance responsibilities, including service on the Board's Executive Committee and then as its Chairman. Under his stewardship, AMREP was repositioned from a financially struggling, debt-burdened and operationally confusing print media and real estate conglomerate controlled by one individual shareholder into a focused land developer and homebuilder in New Mexico, reducing the employee count from more than 1,000 to less than 50, creating a fortress balance sheet unique for a real estate enterprise and redeeming all shares held by the large controlling shareholder.

Ed's governance portfolio extends well beyond these current engagements. He served as a director of Hillenbrand, Inc., a diversified global industrial company listed on the New York Stock Exchange, from April 2010 through February 2021, contributing more than a decade of strategic counsel, financial oversight, and governance leadership to an enterprise whose global manufacturing and process equipment operations required both the strategic planning depth and the governance discipline that Ed's career had produced in exceptional measure. During part of his service at Hillenbrand, he served as Board Chair of PVR Partners, L.P., a pipeline and natural resources master limited partnership listed on the New York Stock Exchange from 2011 until the company's sale in 2014, having served as a director since 2003. His leadership of PVR Partners through its final strategic chapter, culminating in a successful transaction that delivered meaningful value to the partnership's unit holders, is representative of the kind of board governance contribution that has consistently distinguished his service across the full breadth of his public company director career.

Beyond his governance roles, Ed brings to every board engagement the direct operating experience of a leader who has not merely advised or overseen businesses from the boardroom, but who has led them from the inside with the full weight of executive accountability and enterprise performance responsibility. From 1998 until its sale in 2010, Ed served as the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of K-Tron International, Inc., a New Jersey-based material handling equipment manufacturer listed on the NASDAQ Global Market, combining the governance authority of the board chairmanship with direct P&L accountability and day-to-day executive leadership of a publicly traded global enterprise. Under his leadership, K-Tron experienced a sustained period of operational excellence, strategic organizational growth, and geographic expansion, including in Asia that positioned the company for the transaction that would define the culmination of his tenure: the successful strategic sale to Hillenbrand, Inc. in 2010 at a cash share price 15x the price at the beginning of his tenure over twelve years. That transaction, executed with transactional integrity and strategic precision, delivered significant and measurable value to K-Tron's shareholders and stands as one of the clearest and most commercially consequential expressions of the M&A judgment and transaction leadership capability that Ed has brought to every significant corporate engagement of his career.

In 2015 and 2016, Ed was elected Chairman of Penn Virginia Corporation and, shortly thereafter, as the price of a barrel of oil collapsed from more than $100 to under $40 and made the business models of most exploration and production companies nonviable, he was elected Interim Chief Executive Officer of the NYSE-listed oil and gas exploration and development company. At a moment when the company required decisive independent leadership, strategic judgment and deep restructuring experience, Ed stepped in to lead the enterprise through significant organizational and financial complexity. His appointment required the full deployment of both his strategic planning capabilities and his deep experience in corporate reorganization and enterprise stabilization, resulting in a successful restructuring that eliminated approximately $2 billion of high-yield debt and preferred stock, restored operational confidence, and positioned the company for effective long-term performance.

The legal career that preceded and in many respects shaped Ed's development as a corporate executive and board leader was itself a career of the highest distinction. Prior to assuming the chairmanship and chief executive office of K-Tron International in 1998, Ed practiced as a senior partner at Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP, one of the world's most respected and institutionally recognized global law firms, where he specialized in mergers and acquisitions and business law across a full spectrum of structural, transactional and regulatory complexity. In that role, he advised U.S. and multinational boards of directors, senior executive leadership teams, and institutional stakeholders on the full range of major corporate actions, from complex M&A and financing transactions and corporate divestitures to public company governance obligations, securities law compliance, and strategic legal risk management. He maintains active licensure as an attorney with the Disciplinary Board of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, a credential he has held continuously since November 1972.

Across every dimension of his professional life as a senior M&A counsel, as the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of a publicly traded manufacturing enterprise, as the interim CEO who guided a distressed energy company through a complex reorganization, as the board chair and independent director of multiple NYSE and NASDAQ companies, and as the governing board chair of South Jersey's largest healthcare system, Edward Cloues has demonstrated, across more than five decades, the qualities that define the most valuable and most trusted leaders in American corporate governance today: the depth of transactional knowledge to navigate complexity, the breadth of operating experience to understand what enterprises require, the independence of judgment to provide rigorous oversight, and the integrity of character to earn and sustain the confidence of every institution he has had the privilege to serve.
